

CALL FOR SPECIAL ISSUE PROPOSALS

JOURNAL OF CORPORATE LAW STUDIES

Background

The Journal of Corporate Law Studies is the established international forum for high quality analysis of corporate law. Contributions range from corporate law and corporate governance over capital markets and broader corporate financial regulation. Companies are at the forefront of the studies in this journal, whether that be in engaging shareholders actively, regulating misbehaviour among directors or determining the aims of corporate management. We encourage global perspectives and interdisciplinary approaches, which understand the importance of financial, economic and political contexts and the impact of technological developments. This outlook makes us the source for a fully developed, rigorously analytical view of corporate law around the world.

It is a Q1 journal with an Impact Factor score of 1.5 (2024) and acceptance rate of 11%.

Call for special issues

We now open the call for special issues.

There is no preferred set of themes or topics nor prescriptive format for proposals. That said, fit with the journal, originality, the mechanism for securing high quality publications, and coherence and experience of the proposed special issue editors are important. You will be joining a supportive editorial team.

Editorial team

The Editors in Chief are Victoria Barnes, Joan Loughrey, Jennifer Trinks and Sally Wheeler. Lynn Buckley, Ruoying Chen, Osvaldo Lagos Villarreal and Adaeze Okoye are Associate Editors. Philip Gavin and Duncan Wallace serve as the Book Review Editors.

Submissions

Please send a proposal to the editorial office by 1st September 2026.
